INTRODUCTION

Government run shelters for women, the Dar-ul-Amans (DuAs), are crucial institutions for women survivors of violence who often confront threats to their own lives and to those of children accompanying them. In Sindh, the Domestic Violence Act of 2013 and related Standard Operating Procedures direct these shelters to protect the rights of women survivors, ensure their access to legal recourse, and their reintegration in society. Effective service provision in this area requires trained and sensitized caregivers and professionals (police, medico-legal staff judiciary and shelter staff), supported by effective data collection. It also requires ensuring that victims are aware about existing mechanisms and available services.

Further, coordinated efforts amongst relevant government departments/institutions and the development of effective linkages between them and active citizens will ensure timely and effective service delivery to women survivors and those threatened by violence. Currently, survivors and potential victims either refrain from taking action altogether or, if they do, end up being frustrated, and sometimes even further exploited, by an ineffective and insensitive system which extends impunity to perpetrators at all levels.

“Strengthening State-run Shelters and Citizens’ Engagement for Responding more effectively to Gender-Based Violence” is a project aiming to address these lacuna and initiate a holistic approach. The project benefits from the diverse strengths of three civil society organizations with a vast experience of working with government-run shelters and expertise in the area of women rights issues: Rozan, Shirkat Gah-Women’s Resource Centre, and Indus Resource Centre. The three CSOs are jointly running the project in cooperation with the Sindh Social Welfare Department (SWD), and with the support of DAI under the Enhanced Democratic Accountability and Citizen Engagement (EDACE) Project.

This directory, the result of a mapping exercise, provides basic information regarding the legal and other services available in Sukkur, Hyderabad and Larkana Districts of Sindh. The aim is to facilitate effective provision of services to female victims of violence. The data was collected directly from DuA staff, Government officials, Health Department, Police Department, lawyers, civil society, service delivery practitioners, and media persons through standard assessment performas, or check lists developed by Shirkat Gah. The performas were then used by partner organizations in the field to collect information for the mapping from key informant interviews.

The result is this directory of allies and service providers to be disseminated in the catchment communities of these Districts with Dar-ul-Amans. It is hoped that this directory will provide multi-sectoral referral pathways for ensuring quality services to victims of violence, including services provided by police, lawyers, health professionals, social workers, and media.

This mapping study undertaken by Shirkat Gah, focused on planned interventions in Dar-ul-Amans in the said Districts.
